Sick as a dog is actually the oldest of them, recorded from 1705; it is probably no more than an attempt to give force to a strongly worded statement of physical unhappiness. It was attached to a dog, because dogs often seem to have been linked to things considered unpleasant or undesirable (big dictionaries have long entries about all the ways that dog has been used in a negative sense). The explanation for this isn't that people didn't like dogs, it is that diseases such as the plague were often spread via animals like rats, birds, and unfortunately, dogs.
